CC: The Secretary-General
James Administration Building, Room 313

Montreal, QC H3A 0G4

Divest McGill is proud to present the Committee with the following submission. Enclosed is the petition, the signatures of approximately 760 members of the community, a letter discussing conflicts of interest, and a brief detailing the social injury caused by fossil fuels and tar sands. Approximately 360 signatures were received online, and 400 were submitted in person.

Divest McGill has also made available the records in the McGill Archives concerning the Committee, with a focus on South African divestment. The Committee's submissions to the Board, its public reports, and the Board's discussion of those affairs can be found at McGilliLeaked¹. Interested Committee and community members are welcome to peruse that history.

Please accept our sincerest thanks in advance for conducting a thorough and efficient review of the situation. We would be very appreciative if we could be provided with an expected timeline for the process when one becomes available. Our submission today is largely confined to the damages caused by fossil fuels, and we welcome the opportunity to make further representations specifically in favor of divestment.

Sincerely,
The Members of Divest McGill

The hundreds of members of McGill University who signed the petition, along with the students' associations and campus groups who endorsed it, request that the Board of Governors divest from financial institutions that invest in or give loans to companies with objectionable practices.

The involvement of those financial institutions is an integral element of the continued exploitation of the land and its residents, as most of the resource extraction and public-private partnerships require levels of capital that individual companies would be unable to front.

That said, to the best knowledge of Divest McGill, there exist few if any financial institutions whose practices fully correspond with the values of the McGill community, as expressed through this petition. As such, we request that the University participate in active shareholder action to encourage responsible lending and investment practices in financial institutions, and when responsible financial institutions and products, like pooled investment funds, become available, that the University divest its other holdings.

We look forward to entering into a full discussion with the CAMSR to evaluate the best path forward to fulfill the spirit of the petition.

Sincerely Yours,
The Members of Divest McGill

The McGill community expressed broad support for the two requests submitted by Divest McGill to the Committee to Advise on Matters of Social Responsibility.

The Code of Conduct of the Board of Governors (excerpts reproduced opposite) requires members and members at large to withdraw from deliberations and abstain from voting in the case when the member has a real or perceived conflict of interest, or when the member is uncertain if there is a real or perceived conflict of interest.

Where these conflicts of interest or perceived conflicts of interest exist, we sincerely hope that members will recuse themselves from the proceedings surrounding those requests. Those conflicts could include principal employment at a financial institution or energy company, or at a law firm with a significant number of clients considered in this motion; they could also include holding positions on governing bodies of companies considered in this motion or employment by investment firms that engage in the practices considered in this motion.

Thank you for your time, and for your consideration for the Code of Conduct.

Sincerely Yours,
The Members of Divest McGill

From the Code of Conduct of the Board of Governors of McGill University

4. Rules Governing Conflicts of Interest

The following shall apply when considering situations of real or perceived conflict of interest

- 4.1 A Member shall be considered to have a real conflict of interest when he/she holds a personal interest, whether direct or indirect, that he/she is or should be aware of and that would, in the opinion of a reasonably informed and well-advised person be sufficient to put into question the independence, impartiality, and objectiveness that the said Member is obliged to exercise in the performance of his/her duties.
- 4.2 A Member shall be considered to have a perceived conflict of interest when he/she would appear to have, in the opinion of a reasonably informed and well-advised person, a personal interest, whether direct or indirect, that would be sufficient to put into question the independence, impartiality, and objectiveness that the said Member is obliged to exercise in the performance of his/her duties.

5. Management of Conflicts of Interest

- 5.1 Members are expected to have primary responsibility in the identification and management of their own conflicts of interest.
- 5.2 In order to manage one's conflict, a Member must endeavor to identify what is, or could be, a real or perceived conflict of interest. The Secretary-General shall serve as a resource person to all Members in helping to identify conflicts of interest.

6. Examples of Conflicts of Interest

The following, without limitation, are examples of conflict of interest:

- 6.1 when a Member, whether directly or indirectly, has a personal interest in the outcome of deliberations of the Board; in a contract or a proposed contract to be entered into by the University or a University-related body; or is likely to obtain a personal advantage as a result of a discretionary decision made by the University or a University-related body;
- 6.2 when a Member is a member of the senior management personnel of a corporation, institution, or body, whether public or private in nature, whose interests may be in competition with those of the University;
- 6.3 when a Member accepts gifts, gratuities, or favours from a firm or corporation engaged in or wishing to engage in transactions with the University, except in the case of customary gifts of a purely nominal value.

THE SOCIAL INJURY CAUSED BY THE EXPLOITATION OF THE TAR SANDS AND FOSSIL FUELS

By Divest McGill¹

Summary

The students, alumni, faculty, and staff of McGill University have made clear their strong desire to see responsible investment practices. We call on the University to divest its holdings in companies involved in the tar sands and other fossil fuel production, and financial institutions that give loans to those companies.

The tar sands of Northern Alberta pollute the air and rivers, causing irreparable damage to the land and to its First Nations communities.

Companies which extract natural resources without adequate environmental consideration are undermining the stability of the very systems which we, and all life on Earth, depend upon for survival.

-Kristen Perry

Global climate change threatens Canadians and peoples the world over. Entire neighbourhoods of cities like Vancouver, New York, and New Orleans could be underwater due to sea level rise, and polar communities already face extraordinary levels of warming that threatens their infrastructure. Cities like Montreal and Toronto will face more extreme weather events, including snow storms and heat waves, and the continued burning of fossil fuels—in particular oil from the tar sands—will make runaway warming unavoidable.

The fossil fuel companies considered in this brief actively engage in misinformation campaigns to discredit the rigorous scientific consensus that threatens their continued profits.

Financial institutions provide the capital to make large-scale projects like the tar sands feasible.

It is clear that urgent action is needed to counter the threat of global climate change. The McGill community has spoken, and we call on the Board of Governors to make the right choice for the planet, and the right choice for McGill. We call on McGill University to divest from the fossil fuels industry.

The Tar Sands: A Local and Global Concern

The tar sands are huge deposits of bitumen—a mix of clay, water, sand and oil—that is turned into oil through complex and energy-intensive processes that cause widespread environmental damage. Small particles of sand are coated with heavy oil, with a thin layer of water separating the two. The sand and water must be separated from the oil, producing four tons of sand for every barrel of oil extracted. Another three barrels of water must be removed from the river for each barrel of oil. The 2010 Survey of Energy Resources describes the reserves: ²

Natural bitumen and extra-heavy oil are characterised by high viscosity, high density (low API gravity), and high concentrations of nitrogen, oxygen, sulphur, and heavy metals. These characteristics result in higher costs for extraction, transportation, and refining than are incurred with conventional oil.

The largest deposits of tar sands in the world are in Canada. Unlike drilling for oil deposits and pumping oil from the ground, the tar sands typically require huge mining projects to access the bitumen and refine it into oil.

In Alberta, the excavation of the tar sands pollutes the Athabasca River and fills the air with toxins. The tar sands are found mainly under Canada's Boreal forest,³ requiring the forest to be clear-cut to allow the excavation of the bitumen. The ecosystems of the North face irreversible damage, and the companies' promises of rehabilitation and reclamation remain unfulfilled. In 2008, only 0.2% of the land disturbed by tar sands mining was designated reclaimed, and even there the "complex of forests and low-lying wetlands has been transformed into a dry, hilly upland with new trails for human use."³ The spokesperson of Syncrude, the company that owns the reclaimed land, proudly said, "If people aren't looking closely, it blends into the natural landscape."⁴ Over 65,000 hectares of forest have been lost already, with little hope of recovery. ⁵

Fossil fuel production itself, including in Canada, is associated with negative social impacts in the communities nearby, such as higher than average rates of homelessness, substance abuse, and divorce in Fort McMurray, close to the Alberta tar sands. Not to mention that nearby indigenous communities are no longer able to use their traditional territory as it has been taken over by development, and are seeing increased rates of illnesses such as cancer, which may be due to their downstream location from the project.

The environmental, social and health costs of the tar sands in Canada are tremendous and multilayered.

In any discussion of climate change, the tar sands are of the utmost importance. Every barrel of bitumen produced from the tar sands emits three times as much greenhouse gas as conventional oil.⁶ In total, the tar sands are expected to emit 108 million tons of GHGs annually by 2020, about one fifth of Canada's entire carbon footprint.⁷ Already, this project emits more carbon than all of Canada's cars, at a rate of 40 million tons per year.⁸ Because of the tar sands, Canada's emissions have grown more since 1990 than those of any other G8 nation—a total increase of 24.1% between 1990 and 2008—and Canada has one of the world's highest per capita carbon footprints.⁹ Former climate scientist James Hansen wrote in the New York Times that, "If Canada proceeds [with this development], and we do nothing, it will be game over for the climate."¹⁰ The tar sands are a project with extraordinary global impacts that threaten runaway climate change.

The tar sands also have dangerous localized impacts near where they are mined. First Nations communities in the tar sands area report unusually high levels of rare cancers and autoimmune diseases, and fish that live downstream of the development are often malformed and inedible.¹¹ The high concentration of development in one watershed results in correspondingly high levels of contaminants and heavy metals, and the ecosystem is less able to flush them out of the region. Indeed, a 2009 study found a two to threefold increase in summer mercury levels in the river below the tar sands, along with large increases in polycyclic aromatic hydrocarbons, potent atmospheric pollutants and carcinogens. Similar contaminants were present in snow and ice.¹²

Much of the excess water from the production process ends up in huge tailing ponds, which kill birds that land in them and “are suspected of seeping chemicals into groundwater.”¹³ These tailing ponds contain over 720 million cubic meters of water, covering over 130 million square kilometers of land. In the forty years of development, not a single tailing pond has been cleaned enough to be designated as reclaimed.¹⁴ Environmental groups have presented strong evidence of tailing pond leakage, and oil companies have recognized the existence of the problem.¹⁵ In total as many as 166 million birds could be lost over the next 30 to 50 years due to habitat loss and tailing ponds.¹⁶ Furthermore, the economic benefits promised to native communities up north have not necessarily materialized, and the development comes at a tremendous human cost. The Pembina Institute highlights the serious health concerns,¹⁷ including,

- A 30% increase in cancers in Fort Chipewyan compared with expected rates over the last 12 years.
- A three-fold increase in leukemias and lymphomas.
- A seven-fold increase in bile duct cancers.
- Other cancers, such as soft tissue sarcomas and lung cancers in women, were also elevated.

The development of the tar sands threatens communities across Alberta, pollutes the local environment, and contributes to global climate change.

Climate Change: A Global Threat

According to the Board of Atmospheric Sciences and Climate, the arm within the American National Academies for atmospheric and climate sciences, “The preponderance of the scientific evidence points to human activities—especially the release of CO₂ and other heat-trapping greenhouse gases (GHGs) into the atmosphere—as the most likely cause for most of the global warming that has occurred over the last 50 years or so.”¹⁸

I do not want my tuition money to be responsible for the destruction of communities and also the creation of the biggest environmental disaster that we have seen.

-Zoe Pepper-Cunningham

Scientists agree that the highest safe level of CO₂ at 350 parts per million; human emissions have now pushed the level of CO₂ in the atmosphere to 392 ppm.¹⁹ The rate of increase is at 1.8 ppm annually.²⁰

The BASC further advises that, “The faster emissions are reduced, the lower the risks posed by climate change. Delays in reducing emissions could commit the planet to a wide range of adverse impacts . . . [and] the risks associated with doing business as usual are a much greater concern than the risks associated with engaging in strong response efforts”.²¹

Canada, through its international agreements, has made strong commitments to a green future. In the 2010 Cancun agreements of the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change, Canada affirmed:²² that climate change is one of the greatest challenges of our time . . . [and] that deep cuts in global greenhouse gas emissions are required according to science, and as documented in the Fourth Assessment Report of the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change, with a view to reducing global greenhouse gas emissions so as to hold the increase in global average temperature below 2 °C above preindustrial levels, and that Parties should take urgent action to meet this long-term goal, consistent with science and on the basis of equity.

The scientific consensus “has been endorsed by every National Academy of science of every major country on the planet, every major professional scientific society related to the study of global warming and 98 percent of climate scientists throughout the world,” writes Al Gore.²³ Yet despite Canada’s strong public commitments, the country is pushing forward with developing the tar sands, has barely even slowed the rate of greenhouse gas emissions growth let alone reduced its emissions, and under the current government has pulled out of the Kyoto Protocol.

Climate change raises global average temperatures. Every summer, new temperature records are set across the globe. Much of the South West United States saw unprecedented wildfires and droughts, while regions across the world face extraordinary flooding and storms.

Climate scientists used to say that global warming stacks the dice in favour of more extreme weather: what might have used to be a storm so large that it occurred only once every 1,000 years now might happen every 500, or a 100-year flood might instead happen every 60 years. Now they say that we are adding more dots on the dice: whereas before we might have rolled a 12, now we are rolling 13s and 14s.²³ Many attribute Hurricane Sandy’s strength and destructive power to global warming,²⁴ and it has raised an understanding across North America that the effects of climate change are already being felt.

Entire neighborhoods of many major cities are threatened by global warming. Vancouver, New York, New Orleans and many other North American cities are so close to sea level that projected sea level increases could put huge swaths underwater.²¹ The World Bank projects that even 2° degrees Celsius warming will result in between 0.3 and 0.8 meters by 2100 and 1.5 and 4 meters of sea level rise by 2300, and 4° degrees Celsius would result in an up to 1 meter increase by 2100 and up to 4 meters by 2300, placing huge swaths of the world’s coast underwater.²⁵

As the temperature rises, we can expect more and more severe impacts. The Intergovernmental Panel of Climate Change, in its 2007 report, discussed some examples of impacts associated with global average temperature change. Appendix 1 reproduces a figure demonstrating some of the impacts of climate change.²⁶

In North America, the report continues,²⁷

- Warming in western mountains is projected to cause decreased snowpack, more winter flooding and reduced summer flows, exacerbating competition for over-allocated water resources.
- In the early decades of the century, moderate climate change is projected to increase aggregate yields of rain-fed agriculture by 5 to 20%, but with important variability among regions. Major challenges are projected for crops that are near the warm end of their suitable range or which depend on highly utilised water resources.
- Cities that currently experience heat waves are expected to be further challenged by an increased number, intensity and duration of heat waves during the course of the century, with potential for adverse health impacts.
- Coastal communities and habitats will be increasingly stressed by climate change impacts interacting with development and pollution.

If McGill truly ... has a vision of a sustainable future, they should stop lending capital to businesses whose model is in direct conflict with this vision. There is no such thing as "ethical oil", fossil fuels are in direct moral conflict with humanity and McGill should stop funding its operations by spending away our future.

-Raphael Dumas

And for Canadians living in polar regions, the report discusses some projected regional impacts,²⁸ including

- The main projected biophysical effects are reductions in thickness and extent of glaciers, ice sheets and sea ice, and changes in natural ecosystems with detrimental effects on many organisms including migratory birds, mammals and higher predators.
- For human communities in the Arctic, impacts, particularly those resulting from changing snow and ice conditions, are projected to be mixed.

- Detrimental impacts would include those on infrastructure and traditional indigenous ways of life.
- In both polar regions, specific ecosystems and habitats are projected to be vulnerable, as climatic barriers to species invasions are lowered.

It is clear that Canada faces clear and pressing challenges from climate change.

Global warming is also a threat beyond Canada's borders, and many communities across the world have less capacity to adapt and mitigate the impacts.

The World Bank warns that "the distribution of impacts is likely to be inherently unequal and tilted against many of the world's poorest regions," highlighting additional sea-level rise, greater tropic cyclone intensity, and increased aridity and drought pressures. River basins that rely on monsoons, like the Ganges and Nile, and those that rely on seasonal ice melt are particularly vulnerable to widespread drought risk.²⁹

As an institution invested in improving the future through education, McGill has no business helping Canada's energy solutions and environmental policies stay stagnant or regress in areas that hurt the environment.

-Emily Martin

Similarly, island communities— islands make up one tenth of the world's population—face the most extreme threat from rising sea levels. Entire islands could be submerged as the oceans rise, and entire peoples may have to migrate to new lands. Many communities themselves emphasize that while "[c]limate change related migration is likely to be a reality, it need not be a refugee crisis," but the massive relocation of people combined with the destruction of entire homelands is a serious challenge.³⁰

Global instability, on many axes, is predicted. 55,736 people were killed by extreme weather in Russia in 2010, in particular from the wildfires that swept the country. Russia then temporarily banned the export of grain, which caused food price shocks around the world. Natural disasters destabilize the lives of people across the world. The American Security Project describes this trend: "Secure states do not automatically mean secure peoples and climate change is proving that." Climate change and food insecurity, the Project concludes, are international security issues. They "may precipitate large-scale disruption that local public health, law enforcement and emergency response teams cannot contain.”³¹ Weak states, the report warns, “may risk failure or increased regional tensions from the inability to cope” with these new stressors and challenges.³² Regional conflict, disaster relief, and state collapse could be far more likely as warming increases, threatening us all.

Localized environmental destruction also takes place everywhere fossil fuels are extracted from the ground. From mountaintop removal in Appalachia, where entire communities live below tailing ponds that could wash their homes away, to pipeline and oil tanker spills and leaks across the planet, to natural gas extraction techniques that contaminate the groundwater that people drink, the production and extraction of fossil fuels leaves the land scarred and poisoned.

Some of this destruction is legal and some is not. When BP spilled an estimated 172 million barrels of oil into the Gulf after a drilling rig exploded, the company pled guilty to over 12 felony counts.³³ They have so far agreed to $4.5 billion settlement, which would not cover any civil penalties the United States government might seek under the Clean Water Act and other laws.³⁴ In contrast, Royal Dutch Shell was able to avoid responsibility through legal settlement. In 1995 a prominent critic of Shell’s activities in the Niger Delta was hanged by the country’s military regime, and the company was then accused of funding paramilitary operations and bribing witnesses in Nigeria. Shell, vigorously denying all guilt, recently paid a $15.5 million settlement, what the New York Times article calls “a striking sum given that the company has denied any wrongdoing.”³⁵

The consequences of fossil fuel use are tremendous, and they impact every person on the planet.

Financial Institutions

The tar sands are the world's largest capital project, and that investment comes directly from financial institutions, endowments, and pension funds. Similarly, deepwater oil rigs, new hydraulic fracturing installations, and mountaintop removal projects require tremendous amounts of startup money, with the necessary funding coming from investors. These financial institutions enable everyday production and consumption of fossil fuels. The participation of financial institutions in the localized and global destruction caused by fossil fuels companies is willful and irresponsible, and they are equally culpable for the damage caused by these practices.

Undermining Science: The Fossil-Fuel Industry's Anti-Scientific Propaganda

For the past two decades the fossil fuel industry has spent millions of dollars to confuse the public, influence media coverage, and bully scientists.³⁶ Their money keeps the crisis of climate change out of the political sphere and undermines the influence of science in public discourse.

The strategy of large fossil fuel companies mirrors the strategy of the tobacco industry. In denying an airtight scientific consensus outlining the harms of their industry, fossil fuel companies skillfully created the impression of uncertainty and debate for many decades in the by funding phony science and by using their immense resources to exaggerate doubt and ensure these distortions were in the hands of journalists, politicians, and educators. Their plans are well-documented thanks to a series of leaks and evidence provided from lawsuits.³⁷

Many of the fossil fuel companies that McGill invests in were part of the Global Climate Coalition, a group formed to fight greater regulatory involvement, and especially the Kyoto Protocols. GCC internal documents conceded that the science documenting climate change is undeniable, yet the organization externally continued to promote doubt.³⁸

When it started to become public that fossil fuel companies were funding phony science, most companies pulled out of the GCC in 2002. Since then, only ExxonMobil has continued to fund climate denial. The company has spent $23 million dollars over the past decade funding academics and journalists to publish their opinions on the matter.³⁹ They also offered thousands of dollars to any scientist willing to write briefs contradicting the findings of the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change, the international authority on climate change.⁴⁰

Shareholder action against them in 2006 and 2007 along with a large public outcry⁴¹ caused Exxon-Mobil to stop funding the most egregious deniers, yet they continue funding another few dozen such groups.^{42 43}

Because the other fossil fuel companies feared public backlash, their continued involvement in undermining public understanding of the scientific consensus around climate change and its causes is more subtle. They continue to be members and funders of unabashed denial groups such as the American Petroleum Institute and the United States Chamber of Commerce.^{44 45}

These activities have successfully stymied collective action to solve this problem. Politicians have made little headway in passing policy to curb emissions, and large tax breaks and subsidies for fossil fuel extraction remain.

Let's be better than we are today. Please divest from the Tar sands and from Plan Nord; these are not ways to the future we want to see.

Identifying the Investments

McGill University's investments in fossil fuels make up a relatively small portion of the endowment fund, but the global impact of those companies the University invests in is extraordinary. The December 2011 report on the Publicly Traded Equity Holdings of the University⁴⁶ is the most recent data available, and all discussion of the composition of McGill's investments comes from that list.

To identify specific corporations two lists were used. The first, from the Rainforest Action Network,⁴⁷ lists companies involved in the Canadian tar sands; the second, from the Carbon Tracker Initiative,⁴⁸ has a list of the top 100 companies with the largest estimated carbon reserves in coal, and a list of the top 100 companies with reserves in oil and gas.

McGill invests in 645 publicly traded corporations. 14 are involved in the tar sands, while 35 number among the worlds largest fossil fuel corporations. In total, these two lists identify 37 unique companies that McGill profits from, 5.7% of the University's unique holdings. The number of shares in each is not publicly available at this time, and McGill has refused to release further information despite Access to Information requests filed under the Act respecting access to documents held by public bodies AND the protection of personal information.

The full list of companies identified, along with their carbon reserves if available, can be found in Appendix 2.

By participating in the exploitation of the Canadian environment and its peoples, McGill is making decisions for all of us.

-Vanessa Deverell

It should be made clear that this is an incomplete list of the fossil fuel companies that McGill invests in. Only the largest and dirtiest fossil fuel companies are represented on these lists, and the school's endowment fund includes other smaller corporations. All 200 publicly traded fossil fuel companies are included in the scope of our request for divestment.

Of the 35 companies identified by the CTI, many are cross-listed on all three lists, meaning they have some of the largest reserves of carbon in coal, and in oil and gas, and they invest in the dirtiest form of oil production on the planet. The CTI also expressed its concern that Canadian accounting practices artificially lower the size of unconventional oil reserve size estimation, since

“they are only reported under Canadian rules once production is believed to be ‘imminent.’”⁴⁹ Thus it is likely that the size of the actual reserves of carbon owned by the 12 firms involved in the tar sands for which an estimation of reserve size is available is significantly larger than expressed.

All told these 35 companies have at least 205.455 gigatonnes of CO₂ locked away beneath the earth. Those known reserves comprise about 7% of the globe’s known carbon reserves but comprise over 36% of our remaining carbon budget for the next 38 years. The Carbon Tracker Initiative estimates that only 886 gigatonnes of CO₂ can be emitted from 2000-2050 if humanity hopes to keep warming below 2 degrees Celsius. With 321 gigatonnes already burned, only 565 gigatonnes remain in our global carbon budget. Thus 80% of the world’s 2795 gigatonne fossil fuel reserves must remain underground.

None of these fossil fuel companies has pledged to keep 80% of their reserves unburned, nor will they as long as it is profitable to continue extracting.

The question then is what to do about this problem. The responsible answer is divestment.

Conclusion: Moving Forward

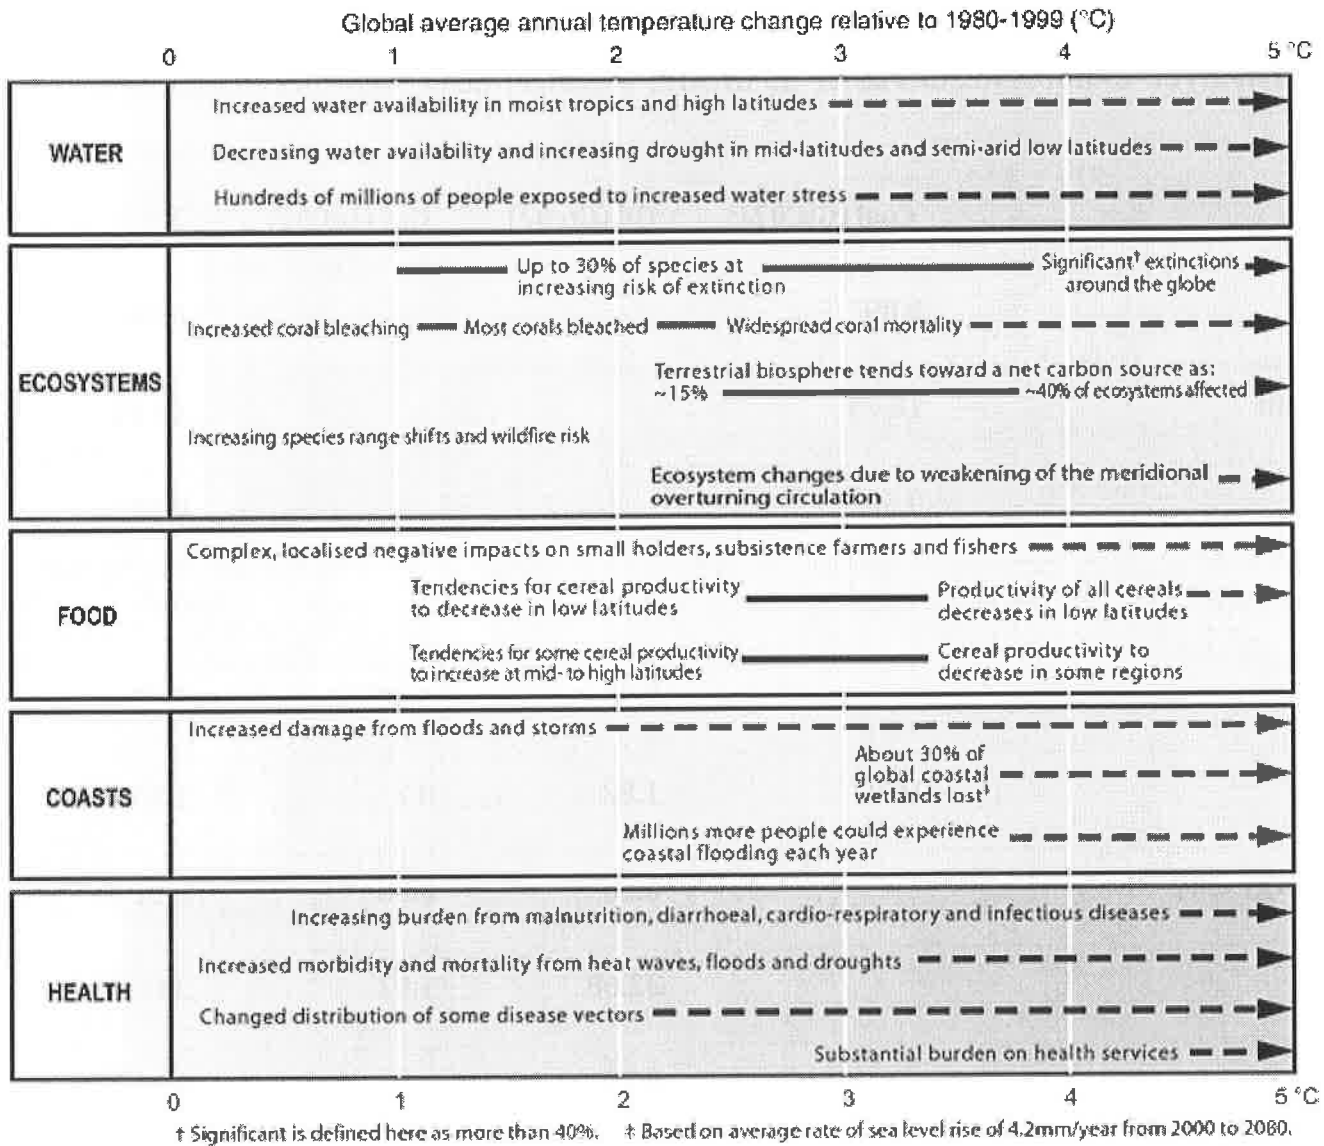

Time is of the essence for humankind. We need immediate action to keep this planet livable, and McGill University is in a position to act. Climate change threatens our University, our country, and our planet. Given the urgency of climate change, the students, faculty, staff, and alumni of McGill University demand:

- That the Investment Committee be instructed to immediately dispose, in an orderly and responsible fashion, of the University’s holdings in corporations which develop the Canadian tar sands, transport or refine hydrocarbon from the Canadian tar sands, sell products of the Canadian tar sands, or are otherwise involved in the production, distribution or sale of goods from the Canadian tar sands, as determined by the Committee to Advise on Matters of Social Responsibility.
- That the Investment Committee be instructed to dispose, in an orderly and responsible fashion in no longer than three years, of the University’s holdings in corporations which produce, refine, transport, or sell fossil fuels, as determined by the Committee to Advise on Matters of Social Responsibility.

- That the Investment Committee be instructed to dispose, in an orderly and responsible fashion in no longer than three years, of the University's holdings in financial institutions which have not adopted, as determined by the Committee to Advise on Matters of Social Responsibility, a policy of making no further loans to corporations that produce, refine, transport, or sell fossil fuels.

					I agree with Bill McKibbin (350.org) that universities can exert financial and moral pressure on fossil fuel industries - and moral and intellectual pressure on government - by taking a stand on global warming and the role of fossil fuel industries in the future of our planet as a habitable place. Who is better placed than teachers and scientists to articulate the threat? And what institution has a greater number of individuals (students) with a stake in the continued existence of a habitable planet? Please seriously consider the idea of divesting from fossil fuel companies as a public and principled stand by the university on the most important issue of our times. Many people of my generation (I am 66) are very anxious about the lack of meaningful action on this topic by the federal government (here and in the US), and are relieved that students are becoming engaged. I will personally support them in any way possible, and sincerely hope that McGill will

I find both the tar sands and the Plan Nord socially and environmentally irresponsible and unethical given the opposition in many of the most impacted communities, the consequences to wild spaces and places, risks for cultivated lands, and risks to the health of their dwellers.

Companies which extract natural resources without adequate environmental consideration are undermining the stability of the very systems which we, and all life on Earth, depend upon for survival. I am glad that my time at McGill is making me more aware of potential solutions to current environmental and social issues. I would be even more proud to be part of a university which is actively working towards these solutions. McGill can be a leader by withdrawing support from the practices which are destroying the only home we have. McGill can choose to divest from fossil fuels and Plan Nord.

We are at a critical point if we are to prevent runaway climate change, which could lead to disastrous ecological, economic, social and political impacts on the world population.

Already we are seeing increased numbers of extreme weather events such as hurricanes, droughts, forest fires and floods across the planet, leading to food insecurity, infrastructure damage, death of thousands of people and increased rates of disease. Furthermore, fossil fuel production itself, including in Canada, is associated with negative social impacts in the communities nearby, such as higher than average rates of homelessness, substance abuse, and divorce in Fort McMurray, close to the Alberta tar sands. Not to mention that nearby indigenous communities are no longer able to use their traditional territory as it has been taken over by development, and are seeing increased rates of illnesses such as cancer, which may be due to their downstream location from the project. Even the economic argument in favour of projects such as the tar sands simply don't make sense, if the consequences of climate change are going to be events such as Hurricane Sandy, which is estimated to have caused $50 billion worth of damage over the course of just a few days. McGill prides itself as a world-renowned institution, as a source of important innovation and research. We must as a global community find ways to reduce our dependence on fossil fuels and transition to a clean energy economy. McGill can assist this process in multiple ways, including research into alternatives and how to effectively implement them. Divesting from these companies is one other way that McGill can show that it is willing to take an ambitious step forward and join other institutions such as Harvard which is in the process of doing the same, for the betterment of current and future generations.

We have to think for the long term sustainability of our planet and use our creative faculties to come up with more sustainable solutions for meeting our needs. This begins with reducing our demands as consumers and using only what we really need. McGill needs to start taking a more active role in creative incentives for students to make conscious decisions and facilitate green living by cutting back on energy use as well as highlighting where energy is being needlessly wasted. I want McGill to TRULY care about its footprint. Thank you kindly for your time. Sincerely, Gabriela Goszczyńska - A McGill Student.

						Issues affecting human rights--and, in the case of climate change, outright human life--should transcend any other considerations, be they political or even financial. Our (Canada's) past and present behaviour has been severely lacking in the regard; I therefore call on you, as governors of McGill University, to live up to McGill's talk of sustainability in placing McGill's actions and money where its words are.

						By participating in the exploitation of the Canadian environment and its peoples, McGill is making decisions for all of us. It is making decisions for everyone who participates in this institution, and for those communities outside of McGill affected by the tar sands and Plan Nord projects (namely, all communities). If McGill as an institution can be said to have any responsibility, then it has a responsibility to reflect the needs and values of its members. While the university's bottom line is important, there are some means of attaining this end that are simply not permissible. They are short-sighted strategies, and hypocritical to what the institution teaches. Please be at the forefront of this clearly necessary movement, rather than tagging reticently behind. Similarly, the government's Plan Nord and the exploitation of the tar sands have been refused by the native peoples across Northern Quebec, Alberta, and British Columbia. I call on McGill University, as a responsible and leading organization in education, to divest its holdings in fossil fuels companies and companies that lobby for the Plan Nord.

As an institution invested in improving the future through education, McGill has no business helping Canada's energy solutions and environmental policies stay stagnant or regress in areas that hurt the environment. McGill, as an institution devoted the learning and improving its community, ought to be supporting instead businesses and initiatives that move Canada's technology, energy useage, and environmental stewardship towards a clean and sustainable future.

The tar sands, which represent wealth to many, do not help the world move towards clean and sustainable energy. The true future of energy lies in sustainability. All fossil fuels, even the tar sands, will run out, and ruining the environment to squeeze the last few drops out of the ground only delays the inevitable switch to alternative energies and harms our beautiful landscapes in the process. Canada would be much better served in being the first nation to develop an independence from fossil fuels. Canada should be an example to the world in making the moral, ethical, and logical decision outweigh the financially greedy one.

Plan Nord represents further environmental damage to our country. Surely any good and beneficial development in the north can be made with the consent of those that live and own the land?

I am now a mother and working on research looking into the links between health and the environment. One of the most irresponsible things we can do as individuals or organizations is participate unnecessarily in climate change. Climate change is the slavery issue of our days. Our grandchildren or even our children will look back and say "what were they thinking?" But they will also recognize leaders in the fight against climate change. That is what I want to be remembered for and so should McGill.

						We must swing our large capital pools towards non-fossil fuel sources such as wind solar and geothermal both as a signal to governments and civil society but as a market indicator guiding other decision-makers, in order to achieve a global shift in energy technologies. Our market investment minds must seek value in emerging markets, not blindly take advantage of the dying days of fossil fuels. There is certainly no rush to develop the north. First we must structure a public revenue model so that all quebeckers can benefit from the development. We must have a moratorium on shale gas

McGill often "talks the talk" of sustainability and ethical investment, but its investment practices seem to indicate that this talk is only superficial. It's time for McGill to take the immediate action that should be a natural next step toward the goals it so often espouses. McGill: Divest from the tar sands

						I feel that the Plan Nord and Quebec's plans to extract resources from Northern Quebec are infringing on Indigenous rights to their territory and well-being, fueled by the Quebec public's reliance on an un-sustainable style of living in terms of development and resource extraction. In order to stop indigenous infringement and the destruction of our land, we need to personally invest in other forms of energy and not encourage or support the drive for resource extraction, but find other sources of non-destructive, renewable energies.

						Divestment is the only responsible course of action if we dont want to continue inflicting serious harm on the planet and its many populations. A university should be contributing to mitigation, not to intensifying the damage. How can we have a very visible sustainability program at the university level on the one hand and then invest in these terribly damaging fossil fuel initiatives on the other? Makes no sense!
